Calvin Huey Negro Shows Promise in Navy Drills

ANNAPOLIS, March 10 — Calvin W. Huey, of Pascagoula, Miss., today was taking long strides toward becoming the first Negro to make the Naval Academy football team.

Huey was among varsity candidates sent through the second day of spring drills by Head Coach Wayne Hardin and his staff.

Hardin said that Huey would be "used as a flanker," because of his speed and exceptional skill as a pass-receiver. He was running today right behind "Skip" Orr, the regular at that spot.

Huey, 6-2 and 180 pounds, played on the undefeated Plebe team last fall and caught four touchdown passes, which tied him for high mark in that department.

Huey is a fine basketball player, too, and captained both teams at Carver High School in Pascagoula. He later attended Okolona (Miss.) Junior College.

Huey came to the Naval Academy "pretty much on his own," coaches said. He wasn't recruited, and obtained his own appointment.

When Huey showed up at practice the first time, he said he was a quarterback.

"What makes you think you can play that position for Navy?" Huey was asked by Dick Duden, Plebe coach.

"Because I exude confidence," Huey replied.

And he has lived up to his word.

Miss. Youth Ends Navy Grid Bias

PHILADELPHIA—An event which would have rated first page notation in the daily press a decade ago, but which went unnoticed here, Sept. 19, was that 22-year-old Cal Huey, first Negro ever to make a football squad at the U.S. Naval Academy, sat on the Midshipmen's bench during the contest against Penn. State Lions.

A native of Pascagoula, Miss., the 6-2, 180-pound sophomore did not get into the game. Veteran sports fans said this was at variance with the usual because most Negroes must own super talents, not just average ones, to find a place on any squad.

Unofficial reports indicate that the Mississippian is showing great promise, and that the chances are all but certain that he will appear in a game or so, before the season ends.

He is popular with teammates and has had no difficulty in classwork.

Huey is now at the same stage attained by Darryl Hill as a Negro candidate for the varsity in the spring of 1962. Hill withdrew from the Academy and enrolled at Maryland University where he starred last season.
